Contemporary architecture and urban design in Flanders are internationally acknowledged as refined, reflective and authentic. Architecturally divers and territorially omnipresent, its built environment is a showcase of European history. Today, it is part of the nebulous city... The course offers a comprehensive presentation of Flanders’ urban architecture and landscapes, and its built environment, how they were imagined by architects, planners, designers, geographers, photographers, and painters, how they have developed in history and can be theoretically analysed, and what their challenges are for tomorrow. The course will in particular look at the different methods of representation and how they offer interpretations from 'views' to 'visions'.
